ARTS ROUNDUP

Updated Daily

Youth bands sought

The Ellensburg Youth & Community Center is looking for high school and middle school bands to perform at the first-ever Youth Center Battle of the Bands on May 7 from 7 to 11 p.m.

Bands must provide a demo or try out prior to May 5. Please contact Stu Spence or Mindy Carbajal at 925-8604.

Presentation for survival for artists

Dick Elliot, CWU alumnist and artist, will give a presentation titled "Public Art and Strategies for Survival as an Artist" on tonight at 7 p.m. in Central Washington University's Randall Hall, room 117. The presentation, sponsored by the Reino and Naomi Randall Lecture Series, will detail Elliot's experiences earning a living as an artist.

Local artists win awards

Out of 98 exhibitors selected from around the nation to participate in the Larson Gallery's 32nd annual photo exhibition, 11 came from Ellensburg.

Artists exhibiting works from Ellensburg are: Justin Beckman, Lisa Buckley, Stephen Chalmers, Doug Clark, Christopher Gianunzio, John Holmgren, Lucas Martin, Tighe McGillivray, Julie Prather, Jim Reiman and Betty Severin.

Prather won the $250 Georgia Moore McKay award to commemorate the influence of women photographers and photo journalists. Chalmers won the $250 Robert G. Villbrandt C.P.A. award and Beckman won the $100 Waringer Chiropractic Clinic award for excellence. Honorable mention went to McGillivray and Reiman. The event is open until May 1.
